Charities are independent organisations that help the poor , the homeless , children , old people and animals. They are involved with human rights , education , medical researches and conservation of environment.

In 1997 , there were about 180 000 charities in Britain , with a total income of 18 billion £ . Many charities that are now well-known throughout the world , such as Oxfam and Amnesty International , began in Britain. Americans are also enthusiastic supporters of charities ; in 1995 ,they gave over 116 billion $ . Oxfam has aid programmes to help poor people overseas , especially the victims of natural disasters. Other well-known charities working in Britain include Barnado's ; which helps children , and Age concern and Help the Aged which support old people. Shelter provides food and place to stay for the homeless and the jobless.

Nearly every town in Britain has one charity shop. These shops are run by volunteer staff and sell second-hand clothes , books and goods in low prices in aid of charity. The traditional method of collecting money is to organise a flag day. Volunteers stand in busy streets asking members of public to put money in a collecting tin. In exchange, they are given a sticker to be put on coat lapels. In recent years , the Telethon has proved an effective method of fund-raising. During an evening of popular TV programmes , television stars ask the public to telephone and promise money to the charities involved. Other fund-raising activities include fets and jumbled sales.
